CARES is an online research study to learn how financial support with or without peer support can help transgender and nonbinary people who are experiencing financial hardship.

WHY ARE WE DOING THIS STUDY?

During COVID, trans and nonbinary people had an especially hard time, but some community groups were able to help by providing financial support and peer mentoring. We want to provide data to show how well that can work.

WHO IS IN THE STUDY?

125 trans and/or nonbinary adults are in the study so far. They all live in the South and have experienced financial hardship. We have enrolled people from 16 states, plus DC. About 2 out of every 3 participants are people of color.

WE ARE STILL RECRUITING!
